BIO

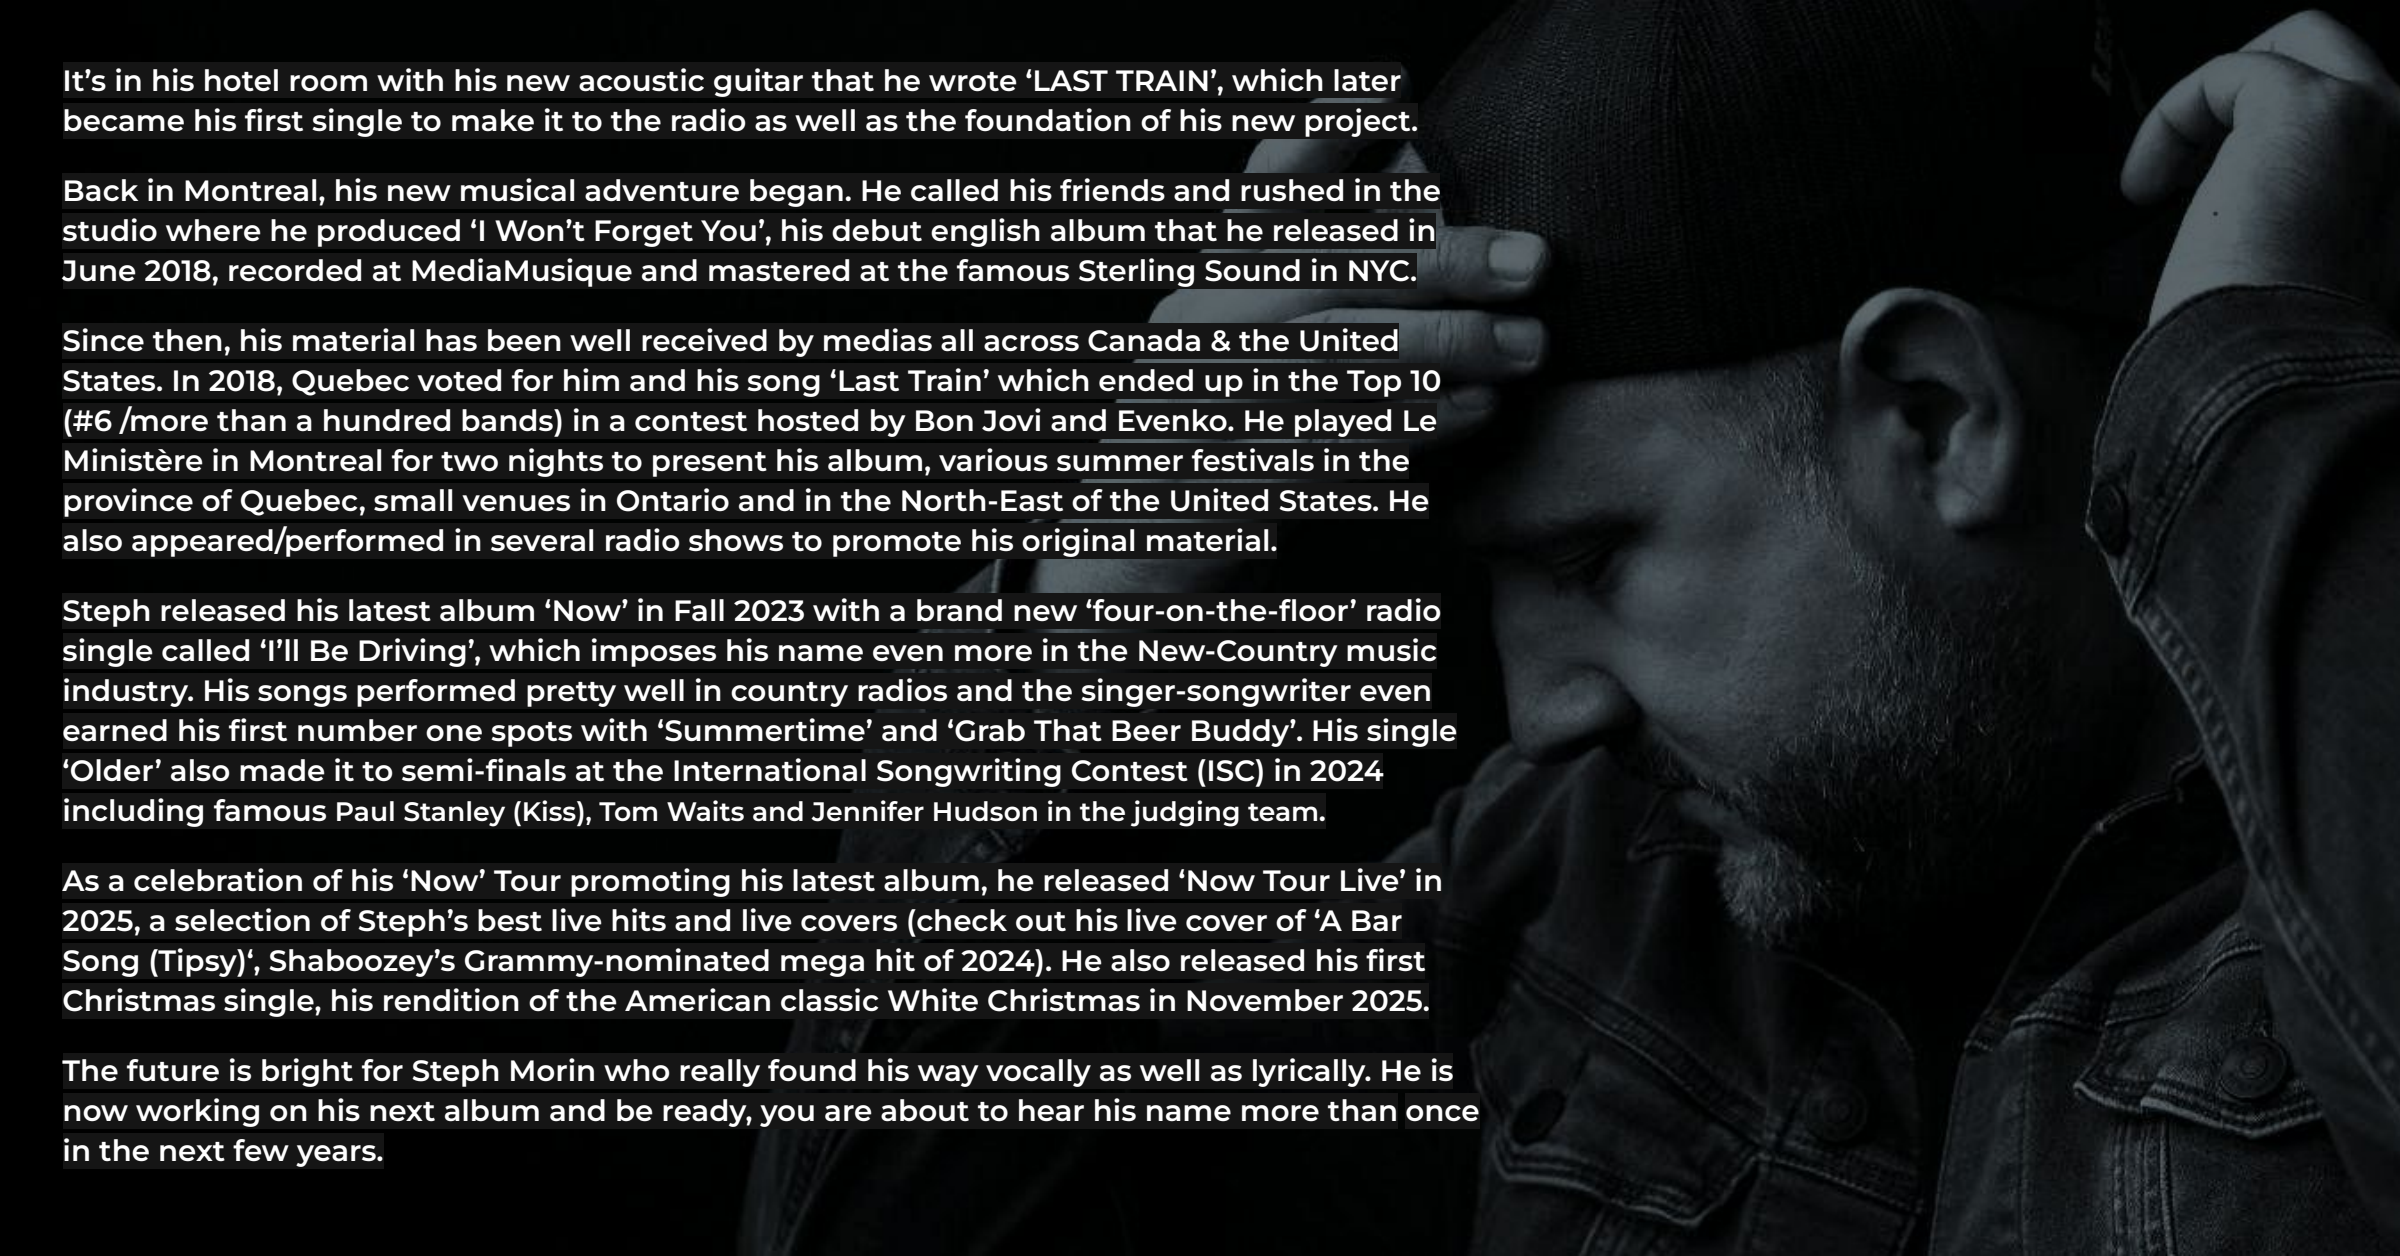

Steph Morin is a Canadian country singer-songwriter born in Montreal. His music career started when he was 17, in a local bar where he used to hang out with his friends. He asked a singer if he could play a few songs between his two sets and the guy said ok! He was hired on the spot by the owner and he played there for 6 months in a row at the age of 17. After playing covers in the Quebec area for a few years, he then decided to hit the road with his own material..

He built his name on the Quebec music scene as an authentic performer who loves to meet his audience. He played many benefit shows through the years and he is always down to help a good cause with his music.

In 2007, he discovered an album called 'Lost Highway' by Bon Jovi, a completely different album than what we normally hear from this band that they recorded in Nashville with a country approach. Steph fell in love with the country vibe, the lyrics / songwriting style, the steel guitar and violin sounds that he was not that familiar with at the moment, and he started listening to artists such as Luke Bryan, Brad Paisley, Blake Shelton, as well as many other country artists that slowly started to take over the best spots in his daily playlist. It then became his natural and primary musical inspiration.

It was in 2015 that his English career took off. Being a huge Springsteen and Bon Jovi fan, he likes to hang out in New Jersey where his heroes were born, and this is where he met a local musician in a music store in Asbury Park. Steph played him one of his new songs and the guy said "Man, you have to release that... you sound great!".

It's in his hotel room with his new acoustic guitar that he wrote 'LAST TRAIN', which later became his first single to make it to the radio as well as the foundation of his new project.

Back in Montreal, his new musical adventure began. He called his friends and rushed in the studio where he produced 'I Won't Forget You', his debut English album that he released in June 2018, recorded at MediaMusique and mastered at the famous Sterling Sound in NYC.

Since then, his material has been well received by medias all across Canada & the United States. In 2018, Quebec voted for him and his song 'Last Train' which ended up in the Top 10 (#6 /more than a hundred bands) in a contest hosted by Bon Jovi and Evenko. He played Le Ministère in Montreal for two nights to present his album, various summer festivals in the province of Quebec, small venues in Ontario and in the North-East of the United States. He also appeared/performed in several radio shows to promote his original material.

Steph released his latest album 'Now' in Fall 2023 with a brand new 'four-on-the-floor' radio single called 'I'll Be Driving', which imposes his name even more in the New-Country music industry. His songs performed pretty well in country radios and the singer-songwriter even earned his first number one spots with 'Summertime' and 'Grab That Beer Buddy'. His single 'Older' also made it to semi-finals at the International Songwriting Contest (ISC) in 2024 including famous Paul Stanley (Kiss), Tom Waits and Jennifer Hudson in the judging team.

As a celebration of his 'Now' Tour promoting his latest album, he released 'Now Tour Live' in 2025, a selection of Steph's best live hits and live covers (check out his live cover of 'A Bar Song (Tipsy)', Shaboozey's Grammy-nominated mega hit of 2024). He also released his first Christmas single, his rendition of the American classic White Christmas in November 2025.

The future is bright for Steph Morin who really found his way vocally as well as lyrically. He is now working on his next album and be ready, you are about to hear his name more than once in the next few years.

CHRISTMAS 2025: NEW RELEASE

Chanson de Noël gagnante Anglaise

White Christmas (2025)
Steph Morin

2025 Christmas song of the year
Plaisirs Country Radio, Qc, CAN.

OCTOBER 2025 - How do you reimagine one of the most iconic American holiday classics without falling into the trap of déjà vu? That's the challenge Steph took on with White Christmas —and he nailed it.

His own original take — a country shuffle version — beautifully blends nostalgia with a modern touch. The Quebec-born singer pays tribute to Bing Crosby's legendary rendition while adding his own warm, genuine flavor. He also nods to the famous Drifters version, featuring a lively electric guitar line that instantly recalls the iconic Home Alone scene that Steph, like millions of families, revisits every holiday season.

The result: a vibrant and refined track, full of movement, driven by rich pedal steel textures and tastefully layered electric guitars. A polished production that strikes the perfect balance between tradition and innovation, while capturing the warmth, energy, and spirit of Christmas.

With its upbeat rhythm, festive atmosphere, and evocative vibe, White Christmas by Steph Morin stands out as a fresh yet familiar reinterpretation — perfect for holiday radio rotations throughout November and December. Already considered one of the greatest Christmas classics, this brilliantly reimaged version brings new life to the airwaves while preserving the timeless magic of Christmas that listeners love.

REVIEWS

"Steph is an absolutely great musician and this album is no exception! (...) The release was an enjoyable listen, and I would definitely recommend this album to any soft rock/country lovers. Steph will be a household name in no time. You can hear the emotion and heart in his music, which leaves you wanting more."

"Campé entre Bon Jovi et Tom Petty, le country-rock corporate de l'auteur-compositeur interprète québécois est prometteur avec ce premier extrait Last Train"

Alex Trudel, ARP Media, VIA 90,5FM

"Wow, c'est très très bon. Ça sonne aussi bien que le New Country Américain! Je vous invite à aller en connaître d'avantage"

Benoit Bélanger, FM 103,3

(Longueuil, QC)

8.5/10 There have been some really great artists from our neighbor to the north over the years. Rockers. Country singers. Pop singers. All kinds. And it's pretty cool. Some of my favorite country artists and country songs have come from Canada. You can definitely feel the rock influence on this one. But that fits in well with what's been going on with country music for a long time

LIVE IN MONTREAL

STEPH MORIN: LANCEMENT NUMÉRIQUE

Claude Desjardins
@desjardins @provincetf.ca

L'auteur-compositeur-interprète Steph Morin propose Live in Montreal, un album de sept chansons enregistrées en spectacle et qu'il offre à ses fans pour les remercier de leur support.

L'artiste du secteur de de Saint-Augustin, à Mirabel, s'est lancé dans l'aventure musicale il y a une quinzaine d'années, dans un bar, alors qu'il assistait à un spectacle. Pendant une pause, il a demandé et obtenu la permission de chanter, ce qui lui a valu d'être embauché sur-le-champ pour un contrat qui a duré six mois. Par la suite, Steph Morin a parcouru le Québec des bars pour faire lui aussi des versions de chansons connues, avant de produire son propre matériel.

L'exercice a débouché sur la production d'un premier EP de cinq chansons, lancé en 2018 sous le titre I Won't Forget You. Le ton est résolument rock, les guitares sont bien présentes et Steph Morin, qui s'exprime en anglais, y dépose sa voix un brin graveleuse sur des rythmes soutenus, pesamment appuyés par la batterie. Du matériel fort bien fait.

L'album Live in Montréal, disponible depuis le vendredi 17 janvier dernier sur toutes les plateformes numériques, contient quatre titres qui apparaissaient déjà sur I Won't Forget You, de même que deux chansons inédites et une solide reprise de Born to be wild, le grand succès de Steppenwolf.

Le tout a été produit à partir de deux captations (20 juin et 24 octobre 2019) d'un spectacle présenté à la salle Le Ministère, à Montréal.
